Gorgeous remains

The Villa Ephrussi de Rothschild is a magnificent residence located on the Côte d'Azur, in Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat, France. It was built between 1905 and 1912 by Baroness Béatrice Ephrussi de Rothschild, a wealthy heiress and art collector.

Architecture "Belle Epoque"

The villa is an exceptional example of Belle Époque architecture, with its elegant pink facade, spectacular gardens and richly decorated interiors. The Baroness designed the villa as a sort of palace of culture, with rooms devoted to music, art and literature.

Gardens remarkable

The villa's gardens are also remarkable, with nine separate gardens overlooking the Mediterranean. Each garden has been designed in a different style, from the Spanish garden to the French garden and the exotic garden. The gardens were classified as a historical monument in 1990.

A jewel of the French Riviera

The Villa Ephrussi de Rothschild is today a museum open to the public. Visitors can explore the interiors of the villa and the gardens, as well what to discover the Baroness' art collection, which includes paintings, sculptures, furniture and decorative art objects.
