Gorgeous remains

The Villa Ephrussi de Rothschild is a magnificent residence located on the French Riviera, in Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat, France. It was built between 1905 and 1912 by Baroness Béatrice Ephrussi de Rothschild, a wealthy heiress and art collector.

Architecture "Belle Époque"

The villa is an exceptional example of Belle Époque architecture, with its elegant pink façade, spectacular gardens, and richly decorated interiors. The baroness conceived the villa as a kind of palace of culture, with rooms dedicated to music, art, and literature.

Gardens remarkable

The villa's gardens are also remarkable, with nine distinct gardens overlooking the Mediterranean. Each garden was designed in a different style, from a Spanish garden to a French formal garden to an exotic garden. The gardens were listed as a historical monument in 1990.

A jewel of the French Riviera

The Villa Ephrussi de Rothschild is today a Museum open to the public. Visitors can explore the villa's interiors and gardens, as well as that discovering the Baroness's art collection, which includes paintings, sculptures, furniture and decorative art objects.
